The standard aspect ratio of American television since the early 1970s, however, is the same as CinemaScope - 16:9 (1.78:1). The exception to this is with some television productions produced in the early 1970s, such as ABC's Hawaii Five-O, which still shoot and broadcast in a 4:3 aspect ratio (1.85:1). Several production companies also shoot in the 4:3 aspect ratio. The early years of CinemaScope (1953
