I searched the docs, but only found the method findSymbol: Is it possible to get a symbol id for a function in CUDA runtime? which tells me that the function is not even available (also I know that CUDA adds the function symbol by hand...). Is there a way to get the symbol? A: Is it possible to get the symbol associated to a function in CUDA runtime? Not directly. Although this is not documented, Symbols are not included in any binary containing cuda libraries. However, if a function is declared inline and is used exclusively within a CUDA kernel, you could examine the function signature directly. Inline Variables, CUDA "Declare your variables as extern inline in your C/C++ main code. You should not see a string at all for inline variables, nor should you see the variable name" Dense-core vesicle enrichment: kinetics of vesicle formation. In this paper, we report on the single vesicle study of the kinetics of dense-core vesicle (DCV) formation. The DCV formation was induced in human erythrocyte ghosts by manipulating the osmolarity of the medium. The time-dependent changes in the number and size distribution of the DCV populations were analyzed using a flow cytometer equipped with a cell sorter. At the onset of DCV formation, a concentration-dependent increase in the size distribution of the vesicles was observed, although the total number of vesicles remained constant. The smaller vesicles (3-5 fl) first appeared and rapidly increased in number. The larger vesicles (5-10 fl) appeared after the smaller vesicles. The time-dependent change in the
